

Crazy Train

About a month or so ago I was leading a pastoral care check-in call with some of the parents of the religious school. Rabbi Glasser and Cantor Stanton joined me on the call as we helped parents wrestle with what it meant to parent during a pandemic. We all vented about the isolation we felt, the challenges of being a fulltime worker, but also a fulltime parent who now had to oversee their child's education. We talked about the challenges of working from home with little ones who know no boundaries and as that topic emerged (with almost supernaturally comic timing) Matthew, my 4 year-old, somehow got control of a phone and started piping in Ozzy Osbourne's song Crazy Train, into my office through our Bluetooth speaker. It started off low, but within microseconds Matthew turned up the volume as loud as it would go and all of a sudden all the parents could hear Osborne's iconic yell of "All aboard!"

Now before you start writing in asking how I could possibly let my 4 year-old listen to a Heavy Metal Rock music song by the self-described "Prince of Darkness" you should know that he doesn't actually listen to this version, but rather the cleaned up version that appeared in the children's animated movie, Trolls World Tour. It so happened that when he asked Siri to play the song he didn't specify the artist so the artificial intelligence picked the Osbourne version. Which version it was is beside the point. The timing of the song gave a beautiful, if not comedic, example of what these last 11 months have been for all of us. It has been a crazy train ride for most of us. Thankfully Alyson picked up on what was happening and quickly took the phone away from him, to which I then heard Matthew through the door yell - full of indignation - "MOMMMMMMMY! I was listening to that!"

I must admit, once the incident was over, I thought to myself, this would make for a great Purim routine. The clergy on Zoom trying to lead a family Megillah reading and every possible bad Zoom glitch that could happen did happen. I must admit, every Shabbat when I log onto Zoom before we go live, I say a prayer wishing for a steady signal.

I had never really listened to the words of the original song, Crazy Train. The only lyrics that I remembered from it was the chorus where Osbourne is screaming, "I'm going off the rails of this crazy train." If you haven't guessed, I don't really listen to much Heavy Metal music. However, as Matthew was forcing all of us on the call to listen to it, at an incredible decibel, the first stanza came on. It goes:

Crazy, but that's how it goes
Millions of people living as foes
Maybe it's not too late
To learn how to love

Jazz Without Borders
Sat., February 6, 8pm

Jazz Without Borders is a product of the vibrant and multicultural New York jazz scene, where Israeli born musicians have had a strong presence in recent decades. Co-led by saxophonist Nir Naaman & drummer Nadav Snir-Zelniker and joined by pianist Eldad Zvulun and bassist Daniel Ori, all band members are active and in-demand musicians on the scene. The group is set to explore the common grounds that are shared by jazz traditions, Jewish, and Israeli music.

Event: $18

Zoom link for the online program will only be available to those who are sponsors or pay for the individual event.

The song continues on about how the world, and his life, represented by the train, is going off the rails and he can't seem to stop it. This might actually be the perfect song not just for this moment in time, but for Purim as well. Megilat Esther is all about how these little nudges in the story quickly devolve into hate and then genocide. At no point in the story of Esther are we able to pull back from the brink of this hatred and anger. The fighting at the end is the only solution for survival. Right now in our country we are seeing a lot of that anger and hatred as well. We need to teach ourselves how to love our neighbors again. It takes a deep breath to calm ourselves and acknowledge the humanity that all of us possess. But despite the rifts we are seeing in society, I don't believe that it's too late "to learn how to love" and co-exist together again.

The Book of V
by Anna Solomon

Sunday, February 21 at 10:30am

The story of Esther is often told as the triumph of a Jewish minority over one man's blinding hatred, through the courage and selflessness of one woman. Anna Solomon's The Book of V challenges this simple narrative—asking, what is Vashti's story? And how do we choose to represent women's lives, both in the past and today? Discussion will be led by Frankie Busch.

All Onegs and Adult Programming will be through Zoom. Look for the links in our weekly emails or on our website.

A "Stories in Music" Concert Monday, February 1 at 7:30pm

We are thrilled to announce a special addition to the Stories of Music series on Monday evenings! Join us for a live performance by Classical and Ragtime Pianist, our very own Ellen Tenenbaum as she brings us an evening of music - from Rachmaninoff and Chopin to Scott Joplin - and their connections to the Jewish community.

"Stories of Music" series is brought to us by the Lowell Milken Fund for American Jewish Music at the UCLA Herb Alpert School of Music, the Milken Archive of Jewish Music, and the American Conference of Cantors, and explores the music of the American Jewish community and the stories it brings - including our own!

Ask Big Questions: How Do We Disagree? Saturday, February 27, 10:45am

Periodically throughout this year, we will spend an hour together in conversation, as part of our "Ask Big Questions" program. Can we change the world through better conversation? "Ask Big Questions" thinks we can, and we agree! Join us as we spend time talking and listening to each other.

Religious School News

Our PreK/K families concluded their Tu B'Shevat learning series in January following weeks of activities that included a take home make-your-own-bird-feeder craft, and interactive Zoom with learners in person while families joined at home.

Upcoming Dates -

1st/2nd Grade Family Program Purim Learning Series in February

Our 1st/2nd grade families will kick off in similar fashion on February 6th. Our students will have a take home craft to begin learning about Purim followed by an interactive Zoom call with families at home.

Save the date of February 13th to attend the 1st/2nd grade family interactive program on Zoom.

Religious School Parent Book club starts on Thursday, February 18!

Join Matthew Vogel, Director of Education & Engagement, as we begin reading The Yes Brain: How to Cultivate Courage, Curiosity, and Resilience in Your Child by Daniel J. Siegel and Tina Payne Bryson. We recommend using Amazon and accessing the Amazon Smile option to give back to our AEMT community. Please RSVP via email at mvogel@aemt.info for more info about our first meeting on 2/18.
